Additionally, Angra Group may use certain types of cookies during users' navigation on the website, which allows Angra Group to recognize user preferences and improve their browsing experience. If the user wishes to refuse the installation of these cookies on their device and/or opt for the removal of cookies, this can be done through the Cookie Settings available on the website.

2 Sharing of personal data

Angra Group may share personal data with other business entities, subcontracted service providers, and other suppliers as necessary, always in accordance with applicable Brazilian legislation and adopting best practices in information security to ensure the safety and confidentiality of personal data.

Furthermore, if a police, administrative, or judicial authority requests access to data, and such a request is backed by the applicable Brazilian legislation, Angra Group may share personal data to meet this requirement.

Lastly, Angra Group may share personal data to protect its interests in any type of conflict, including administrative and judicial demands.

3 Retention and deletion of personal data

Personal data processed for the purposes described in this Policy will be stored by Angra Group only for the necessary period to achieve the purpose for which the data was collected, such as during the period in which the data subject or the entity they represent maintains a contract with Angra Group or to fulfill a legal or regulatory obligation. The storage of data will always be based on a legal ground, ensuring the data subject's right to request the deletion of their information as indicated in item 4.

4 Rights of data subjects

In compliance with the applicable legislation on personal data processing, Angra Group informs that it respects and guarantees the possibility for data subjects to present requests based on the following rights under the LGPD:

- Confirmation of the existence of personal data processing;
- Access to personal data;
- Correction of incomplete, inaccurate, or outdated personal data;
- Anonymization, blocking, or deletion of unnecessary, excessive, or non-compliant personal data;
- Data portability;
- Deletion of personal data processed based on consent, except in cases provided by applicable law;
- Information about public and private entities with which we share personal data, if applicable;
- Information on the possibility of not providing consent and the consequences of refusal;
- Revocation of consent when applicable.

If the data subject needs to exercise any of the rights mentioned above or believes their personal data has been or is being used in a manner incompatible with the purposes described in this Policy, they may submit their request through the contact channel provided in item 6 of this Policy.

In some cases, Angra Group may have legitimate reasons not to comply with a request to exercise rights. These situations include, for example, cases where the disclosure of specific information could violate business secrets of Angra Group or third parties, as well as cases where Angra Group is obligated to retain data to fulfill legal or regulatory obligations or to enable the defense of Angra Group's or third parties' rights in disputes of any nature.

5 Security of personal data

Angra Group employs its best efforts to protect the personal data it processes, implementing appropriate technical and organizational measures to safeguard this information against unauthorized, illegal, accidental, or destructive processing, such as storing the personal data in secure operational environments with restricted access or in physical files accessible only to authorized employees and/or service providers.

Although Angra Group adopts security measures compatible with the nature of the personal data it processes and with the best practices available in the Brazilian market, it cannot guarantee total security as the data may be susceptible to technical failures or malicious actions from third parties, given the nature of current information technologies.

6 Contact

Angra Group is available to clarify any doubts arising from this Policy or the way we handle personal data, as well as to receive requests from data subjects through the following contact channel:

Data Protection Officer: Rafael Vilela

Contact channel: privacidade@angrapartners.com.br

7 Updates and effectiveness

Angra Group seeks to improve its activities daily and therefore reserves the right to change this Policy at any time, aiming primarily to provide data subjects with an increasing level of transparency regarding how we process personal data.

If this Policy undergoes significant changes, Angra Group will disclose the altered version of this document to inform data subjects about the new conditions for processing their personal data.
